Overview & Current Events

Albertsons (ACI) is one of the largest food and drug retailers in the United States. With $$ 70$ billion in sales, a market cap of $$ 11.6$ billion and a history dating back to the 1860 s, Albertsons went public in 2020 and has paid a quarterly dividend ever since.
The company reported their Q4 and full year 2023 results on April $22^{\text {nd }}, 2024$, and announced a quarterly dividend of $\$ 0.12$ per share. With Q4 earnings of $\$ 0.43$ per share and full year earnings of $\$ 2.23$ per share, the company's forward annualized dividend of $\$ 0.48$ is well covered by their ongoing business.
The $4^{\text {th }}$ quarter delivered solid operational results amid a challenging economic backdrop, and the management team is satisfied with the company's performance during 2023. Looking forward to 2024 the company intends to continue investing in its Customers for Life strategy, and developing the digital and omnichannel capabilities to support this plan. Net sales revenue was $\$ 18.3$ billion during the fiscal year. During the full year, the company spent $\$ 2$ billion in capital expenditures, which primarily included store remodels, opening of new store locations, and continued investment into its digital platforms.
In connection with the pending merger agreement with Kroger, on September $8^{\text {th }}, 2022$, the company and Kroger entered into a definitive agreement with $C \& S$ Wholesale Grocers for the sale of select stores, banners, distribution centers, etc. The court cases seeking to prevent the merger are ongoing, which is reflected in the share price, with around $\$ 5$ of premium remaining to be taken by investors seeking to take advantage of this merger in the event it closes.

With only a few years of historical data available to us, two of which were as a private company, it's difficult to make reliable estimate for future growth. Therefore, any estimates we make must be based around the industry in which the company operates in, namely the food and drug retail industry.
This is a mature, well established, and stable industry, which means growth rates will be low and primarily in-line with GDP growth. The fact that ACl is one of the largest players in this industry, and that retailing has notoriously low margins, means that earnings-per-share growth will likely be small. We forecast $3 \%$ annual earnings-per-share growth along with dividend growth in-line with earnings-per-share growth.
While sales figures are likely to remain steady, the low margins inherent to the food and drug retailing business means that earnings can fluctuate wildly on a yearly basis. That said, on average we would expect 2029 EPS to be around $$ 2.61$ per share, and a dividend of around $$ 0.56$. This is a conservative estimate considering the low but stable growth of food and drug retailing, as well as the unique cashflow advantages that retail enjoys.

Albertsons went public during 2020, at a time when there was great uncertainty in the market, particularly for physical retail businesses who were undergoing lockdowns and other restrictions. As the economy reopened, the company appears to have had its valuation re-rated upward by the market and is now standing at around a P/E ratio of 9 .
This P/E ratio may seem like an undervaluation compared to some of its competitors like Walmart, Target, or Ahold Delhaize, but it's explained by the uncertainty around the company's upcoming merger. As a result of this, if the merger doesn't happen, we would expect that a further re-rating will occur, and that the 2029 P/E will be around 12.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

The company operates a low margin business in a highly competitive industry without any significant competitive advantage against other similar businesses. Retail is a harsh industry to compete in, and there are three primary factors that determine success, those are: Location, price, and product availability. Albertsons is a large company with more than 3,000 stores. This allows them to compete on location, and with $$ 70$ billion in revenue it's clear that they have the scale and product availability to compete with the other large U.S. grocery retailers. These efficiencies of scale make the business remarkably stable, and able to support their ongoing dividend.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Albertsons' five-year total return forecast comes in at 11.1\% per year, driven by 3\% earnings-per-share growth, a 2.4\% dividend yield, and a major revision in valuation multiple. Additionally, there is the potential for a quicker realization of value as a result of the ongoing merger process. The current uncertainty regarding regulatory approval of the merger agreement leads us to give the company a Hold rating.
