The Company earnings have been very erratic thought the past ten years. From 2013 to 2016, earnings were on a downward trend. From 2017 to 2019, earnings were growing at a double-digit rate. Over the past ten years, the company has grown earnings at a 5.2% Compound Annual Growth Rate (CAGR). Over the last five years, the company has had a -8.7% CAGR, driven mainly by the 2020 COVID-19 pandemic, which saw earnings drop by (40)% from $1.04 per share in 2019 to $0.62 per share in 2020. However, we expect the company to continue to grow earnings at a 2% annual rate for the next five years. This will be driven by optimizing its branch networks and acquiring smaller local banks. The Company has a solid dividend history considering the erratic earnings growth. Over the past ten years, the dividend has grown at a 4.9% rate and a 2.1% rate over the past five years. Thus, we expect the company to continue to grow its dividend at 2.0% for the next five years.

Valuation Analysis

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	Now	2029
Avg. P/E	18.7	21.0	36.5	18.2	16.6	15.9	20.4	11.7	13.3	11.78	16.6	13.0

Because of the erratic earnings over the years, its PE ratios have also seen their ups and downs. For example, in 2016, the company's PE was 36.5, and in 2021 it was 11.7. Over the past ten years, the company has had an average PE of 18.4 and a five-year PE average of 14.6. We think that a fair PE ratio would be 13x. This is below its ten- and five-year average, but it would account for the erratic behavior of the company earnings. The dividend yield is desirable to income investors. The current dividend yield is 7.5%, higher than its own ten- and five-year average of 4.3% and 4.7%, respectively.

Safety, Quality, Competitive Advantage, & Recession Resiliency

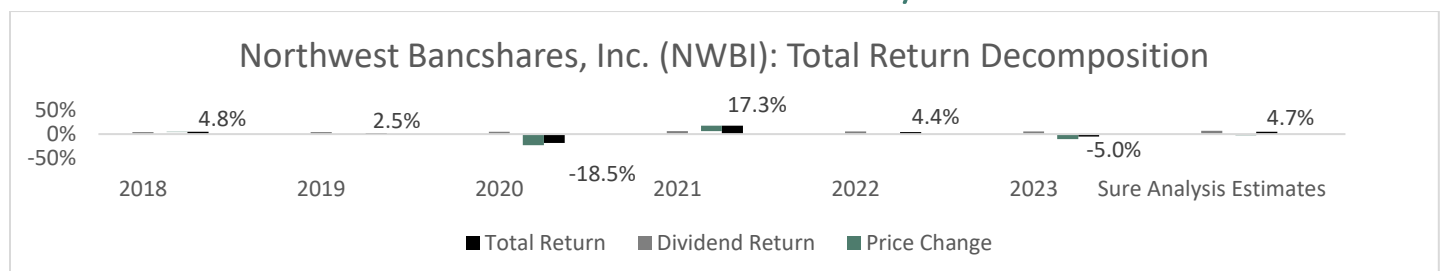

Year	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019	2020	2021	2022	2023	2024	2029

Northwest Bancshares is a small local bank compared to other national banks, but its most significant competitive advantage is its size. For example, it's easier for the company to optimize and minimize expenses which will help grow profit. Also, it is faster for small business owners or homeowners to obtain loans, which will help the company compete in the complete loan industry. The company did very well during the Great Recession, considering most banks had substantial earnings drops and dividend cuts. NWBI did not cut its dividend during the Great Recession, but earnings fell by (32)% in 2009. But in 2010, earnings grew by 53% to $0.53 per share from $0.44 per share in 2009. However, during the COVID-19 pandemic, the company's earnings fell (40)% from $10.4 per share in 2019 to $0.62 per share in 2020. Nevertheless, the company continues to pay a rising dividend. The company has a debt-to-equity ratio of 0.4, which is good. This is the reason the company was able to withstand the COVID-19 pandemic. Overall, NWBI has a solid balance sheet that has withstood two economic recessions.

Final Thoughts & Recommendation

Northwest Bancshares is a solid bank with an outstanding balance sheet and dividend history. The biggest concerns are inconsistent earnings and a higher dividend payout ratio. We expect the company to generate an annual rate of return over the next five years of 4.7%. This will primarily be driven by a higher dividend yield of 7.5%. Thus, Northwest Bancshares earns a hold at the current price.
